

This is to ACQUAINT the CURIOUS in General,
That there is to be seen from half after Ten in the Morning, till Nine in the Evening, without Loss of Time,
At the ~~SUN, in the CORN-MARKET,~~ Duke & Anchor
THE SURPRIZING
WARWICKSHIRE YOUNG LADY,
Miss HAWTIN, from Coventry.

SHE is perfectly agreeable in her Countenance, of a fine Presence, and amazingly ready and sensible in her Discourse. This little Artist or Phænomenon of human Nature, by the help of her Toes and Feet only, is capable of many curious Performances; she threads a Needle, sews, picks Pins or Needles from a Pin-cushion, and flicks them in again, uses the Scissars dexterously in cutting out Devices in Paper; picks up Money, puts it in her Pocket, and takes it out again; feeds herself, drinks out of a Glass with Ease, and exhibits sundry other Fancies too tedious to mention. Several eminent Physicians, Surgeons and Man-midwives, have accurately examined this young Lady, particularly Francis de Valangin, M. D. and Member of the Royal College of Physicians; Thomas Umfreville, M. D. Mr. Horsley, Surgeon and Man midwife; as also that diligent Investigator of Nature, Thomas Fisher, Gent. who all agree that she is NATURÆ LUSUS QUAM MAXIME MIRABILIS, or a most wonderful Sport of Nature, and a convincing Proof that the DIVINE BEING can supply any Defects he permits in the Animal Formation; and unanimously recommend this human Rarity (as remarkable for its ripe Understanding, as its make) to the serious Attention and Observation of the Publick in General, and the Anatomist and Virtuosi in particular.

Any of the Nobility, Gentry, &c. willing to be satisfied of the Merits of this young Lady, by giving timely Notice, will be waited on.

VERSES extempore by a celebrated VIRTUOSO,

Wrote on seeing the above astonishing and curious Wonder of Nature, April 1, 1769.

INSTEAD of having either Hands or Arms,
Nature's supply'd her with Ten Thousand Charms;
The little Artist threads her Needle well,
And does all the Wonders of the Age excel.
She, with her Toes, exhibits more to view,
Than Hundreds with their Fingers e'er could do;
She Feeds herself, can drink when e'er she please,
And every Action does with so much Ease,
That Hundreds flock to see her every Day,
And every one goes satisfied away.
